STEPHEN R. JANACK
Vice President for Marketing and Communications
Director of Communications Services

Stephen R. Janack is responsible for all internal and external communications for the SUNY College of Nanoscale Science and Engineering and each of its affiliated organizations. He oversees development and implementation of CNSE's media relations and marketing strategies, as well as its educational and community outreach initiatives, working with his colleagues on CNSE's senior and executive staff to translate the CNSE vision, mission and objectives into a world-class communications drive.

Mr. Janack has served as host and producer of two Capital Region television programs, including "NanoNow," CNSE's weekly show, which aired on FOX 23/WXXA-TV and featured interviews with leading executives in the education, technology, business and government sectors, along with segments that demonstrated the leading-edge research at CNSE's Albany NanoTech Complex and the growing impact of nanotechnology on society. Previously, he was host of "Tech Valley Report," which aired in Time Warner Cable's Albany Division and showcased New York's growing high-tech initiative.

Prior to joining CNSE, Mr. Janack served as senior vice president and chief communications officer at the Albany-Colonie Regional Chamber of Commerce, where he was recognized nearly 40 times for communications excellence in local, regional and national awards competitions, and as president of the organization's Business Services Corporation, a for-profit entity responsible for revenue-generating member benefits.

Previously, Mr. Janack spent 15 years as an award-winning radio and television broadcast journalist in New York's Capital Region, serving as a news writer, producer, reporter and anchor, and in leadership positions as assignment manager, news director and program director. He is a 1984 graduate of St. John Fisher College in Rochester, where he received a B.A. in communications/journalism.
